Cops looking for 'homophobic' suspect

BOSTON. Transit Police released surveillance images Thursday of a man they said kicked a T passenger on the Red Line in Dorchester last month. The suspect not only kicked the victim while in Ashmont Station, but made a homophobic slur, according to Transit Police. The incident allegedly happened around 10 p.m. on Dec. 16. The suspect is described as a black male in his late 20s. METRO

Trio indicted for massage parlor prostitution

MASSACHUSETTS. The operators of massage parlors in Wellesley and Revere were indicted Thursday on charges related to human trafficking and prostitution.

A grand jury indicted Joseph Girouard, 55, of Revere, Zhen Lai, 37, of Quincy, and Wenjie Dong, 49, of Malden, according to the attorney general. The trio ran Sun Spa, also known as Sun Studio, in Wellesley and Bodywork in Revere. The women they allegedly transported to the spas would offer sexual services for "tips" and the trio would keep most of the profits, authorities said. They were arrested in October after an investigation and pleaded not guilty. METRO

Murray didn't comply with campaign laws

MASSACHUSETTS. State regulators found evidence that Lt. Gov. Tim Murray did not comply with campaign finance laws by allowing public employees to fundraise in public buildings. Scott Ferson, Murray's political spokesman, emphasized that the Worcester Democrat asked for the investigation in order to return any contributions that may have been procured illegally. METRO

T looking into later late-night service

Passengers have longed for service after the bars close ◗ Governor's budget proposes $1B to pay for it

▶ Your wish of riding the T home from the bars could soon be granted.

In response to passenger feedback, the MBTA is looking into extending T service past 1 a.m. "on a limited basis."

MBTA customers made it clear during a series of public meetings last fall that they want more late-night service.

Gov. Deval Patrick last week proposed a transportation plan that would allocate about $1 billion for MassDOT to extend T service hours until 2 a.m. on weekends.

"We've gotten a lot of feedback from people saying, 'Man, I wish I could get a subway or a bus at 2 a.m. on a Saturday night after a time out with my pals,'" Patrick told Metro last week. "People said they would be willing to pay for that, but in order for people to want that, we've got to make sure the trains come on time, that they're properly lit, comfortable and safe."

MassDOT spokeswoman Kelly Smith said there would be many details to work out. "The MBTA would ensure that any additional scheduled service does not reduce the ability to perform track, vehicle and station maintenance ... which currently take place during the overnight period."

Finding funds

If additional operating funds are identified, major bus routes and the most heavily traveled portions of the subway and light-rail systems will be considered as part of a pilot program, according to MassDOT spokeswoman Kelly Smith. The cost of the service would be determined once operating schedules are identified. The extra costs would be due to fuel, power, personnel, cleaning, station and parking area lighting and increased customer service and Transit Police hours.

Two-alarm fire damages Eastie home

A two-alarm fire broke out in an East Boston home Thursday afternoon. Fire crews responded to 29 Leyden St. just after 2 p.m. for a basement fire, according to the fire department. 'Apple picking': T Police warn of electronic theft Transit Police sent out a warning to riders Thursday: Hide or hold on to your electronics while on the MBTA.

Thefts of smartphones and electronic devices — most notably Apple products — is a nationwide trend often referred to as "Apple picking," and according to Transit Police, it is a crime of opportunity.

Of the 20 robberies on the T this month, 13 have involved either an iPhone or Samsung Galaxy, police said, adding that most robberies of electronic devices happen near the train doors.

Riders are advised to avoid cell-phone use while on the T, conceal expensive electronics and use earphones that are any color except white. METRO

More T troubles follow Wednesday's Green Line crisis

The MBTA reported delays Thursday, one day after a smoldering cable disrupted Green Line service for thousands of rush-hour commuters.

While Wednesday's debacle shut down the Green Line for three hours, Thursday's disruptions ranged between 10- and 30-minute delays and affected commuter rail services as well as the Red, Green and Silver lines.

A spokesman for the T said the bitter cold was to blame for a second smoldering cable at Arlington Station on Wednesday — that one shut down the Green Line around 9:40 p.m.

MBTA crews on Thursday replaced three sections of cables at the switch boxes, according to a spokesman. Crews were also expected to finish pulling the remaining faulty cables that day.

Beginning this weekend, another crew is expected to thoroughly test all DC cables along the Green Line tunnels. METRO/MR

Man charged with robbing Hub college students

Police are still searching for the second suspect ◗ The men used a pellet gun in the robbery, police said

NICOLAUS CZARNECKI/METRO

▶ Saturday's robbery took place near Freeman and St. Paul streets.

One of two men allegedly responsible for robbing three Boston college students was arrested Wednesday night while the other was still at large.

Evan Holmes, 29, of Quincy, was charged with armed robbery, Brookline police said.

Police responded to an apartment building at Freeman and St. Paul streets just after midnight Saturday for a report of an armed robbery.

Officers were met by three unidentified women who said they were spending the night with their friend and were walking near the apartment building when they were approached by two men with a gun. The men demanded their purses and fled.

The three women, who attend Boston University, Northeastern University and New England Conservatory, said they also had their iPhones stolen.

The women provided descriptions of the men and the direction in which they fled.

On Wednesday night, police served an arrest warrant for Holmes, who lived at a sober home in Quincy. A manager at the home later told police he had found a black pellet gun under some rags in a bathroom.

It was one of three robberies that involved BU students near campus last weekend.

Pentagon lifts US ban on women in combat

GETTY IMAGES

▶ Women serve in combat roles for the armed forces of a few developed nations, including Canada and Israel.

The Pentagon lifted its ban on women in front-line combat roles on Thursday in a historic step toward gender equality in the U.S. armed forces after 11 years of nonstop war, during which the front lines were often not clearly defined.

Defense Secretary Leon Panetta and General Martin Dempsey, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, signed an order rescinding the rule that prevented women from serving in direct combat jobs.

"They serve, they're wounded and they die right next to each other. The time has come to recognize that reality," Panetta said, noting that 152 women in uniform had been killed in Iraq and Afghanistan. REUTERS

TICK, TICK GOES THE WHITE HOUSE

Advice

TOM FOREMAN

POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT FOR CNN

letters@metro.us

CNN=POLITICS

While President Obama was looking out over that ocean of cheering fans at his inauguration, I was looking at my watch. I was not being rude, but acknowledging a political fact: The minutes are already ticking down on his presidency.

That may sound cruel, partisan or flat-out impossible, considering recent successes that have Democrats crowing and Republicans crying. But for all of the president's grand ambitions to tackle tax reform, immigration and gun laws, a daunting calendar could undermine even his best efforts in the short and long run.

First, there are the mid-term elections. In 2014 (that's right, next year) the Democrats have to defend 20 seats in the U.S. Senate, seven of which are in states that President Obama lost to Governor Romney. Democrats in many of those races, who must win moderate votes to keep their chairs, may be hesitant to stand too close to the president if he tacks left on divisive issues. And with the Republicans running the House, a Senate with too many squishy Democrats could doom many of his legislative hopes.

Second, there is the 2016 presidential race. Yes, I know it is far too early to talk about this. I'd rather take a cheese grater to my scalp. But presidential campaign seasons have steadily expanded in recent decades, so much so that both parties will be triangulating a path to victory the moment the mid-term vote is past, if not earlier. That will bring furious attacks on the president from one side of the aisle, and on the other … well, let's just say that the minute the next race heats up, the Capitol kitchen starts serving lame duck.

Quoted

So how long does the president have to make his mark in this second term?

So how long does the president have to make his mark in this second term? I've chatted up some of the best political minds I know, and they put it at about 18 months. Perhaps less. After that, like Beyonce, Barack Obama might be mouthing the words — but neither party may be listening.

THE COMEBACK OF THE COMEBACK

All of these musicians have finally decided after long hiatuses that 2013 is the year for them to get back to releasing some new music

Artist	Years in hibernation	Peak	Scheduled return	Welcome back?
David Bowie	10	His first was 1973, but then again in 1983.	When he posted the new song "Where Are We Now" online late one night this month, many of the people at his label didn't even have a clue. "The Next Day," his 24th(!) studio album, drops in March.	Whether he's the Thin White Duke, Ziggy or just himself, Bowie is the type of artist whose space oddity is always welcome.
My Bloody Valentine	21	"Loveless," their 1991 album, set the tone for the shoegaze movement and basically enabled Smashing Pumpkins to become Smashing Pumpkins.	The follow-up album to "Loveless" is reportedly finished and will be released at some point this year. If you've stuck by them for more than two decades, you can wait a few more months.	Though MBV toured in '07, and were as ear-bleedingly rad as ever, there's always a fear of a "Chinese Democracy"-type disappointment. But frontman Kevin Shields has done a bit of soundtrack work and seems like he's still on his A-game.
The Postal Service	10	They reached such great heights with "Such Great Heights" in 2003. The song was featured on the "Garden State" soundtrack ... and just about everywhere else.	The re-issue of their only album, "Give Up," will be released in April, to be followed by a tour.	Our little twee ears are eagerly awaiting the two new songs that will be included with this album, so yes!
Eve	11	In 2002, she won the first Grammy for Best Rap/Sung Collaboration for "Let Me Blow Ya Mind" with Gwen Stefani.	Her album, "Lip Lock" drops in May.	Eve has a scorpion-like sting to her raps and when she released a taste of "Lip Lock" in October with "She Bad Bad," its dub-step conscious production made it clear she has not spent 11 years under a rock. We'll let her blow our minds again!
Destiny's Child	8	"Survivor," 2001. Enough said.	The album "Love Songs" is out Tuesday. This reunion initially seemed like a favor to help get Beyonce's buddies some extra dough, but now it seems more of a favor they're doing for her to distract us from that whole Star Scandal Banner thing.
Biz Markie	9	Oh bay-bee, Biz had what we neeeeeeed(ed) in 1989. But that song has endured in commercials and on "Always Sunny." Biz Markie has also enjoyed a second life on "Yo Gabba Gabba" with Biz's Beat of the Day.	While there is no release date, the rapper says he is in the studio now.	While we can't say we've been exactly clamoring for new material from the Biz, he did recently tell Billboard, "It's going to be timeless." So there's that.
Boyz II Men	These guys have been putting out albums consistently, but a new joint tour is their most high profile outing since ...	"Motown Philly" was everywhere in 1994.	A tour with NKOTB and 98 Degrees kicks off on May 31.	A nostalgia tour is the best move for this creatively sapped crew.
Adam Ant	17	"Goody Two Shoes" was a hit in 1982, which is before many of you were even born.	It's scheduled for late 2013.	Stateside, Mr. Ant wasn't ever popular enough to warrant calling this a "comeback." One slot on a casino-venue nostalgia tour would've done it justice.

- Peak: Has he stopped peaking? We'll just say 2006.

- Welcome back? Yes. A thousand times, yes.

Clearing off the cobwebs

Handel and Haydn Society artistic director Harry Christophers breathes new life into old music 'If you want to listen to an orchestra just sit still in their seats, then why don't you just stay at home and listen to the CD?'

When Harry Christophers faces the musicians on stage at Symphony Hall, it sometimes looks like he's conducting more than just the orchestra and singers; it looks like he's conducting electricity.

"We are trying more and more to be demonstrative on stage," admits Christophers, who is now in his fourth season as the artistic director of the Handel and Haydn Society. During his time with the organization, he says he's watched the audiences begin to diversify.

"It's all about clearing the cobwebs off of this music and bringing it to life," he says.

Christophers achieved international success for founding and conducting the U.K.-based choir and period instrument ensemble The Sixteen more than 30 years ago. He says Americans need to be exposed to less stodgy interpretations of period music to realize the inert energy within these compositions: "I'm not saying the orchestras and singers should move around and be a distraction, but I'm saying that they should get into this music and that physically, they are involved in it," he says. "Because otherwise, if you want to listen to an orchestra just sit still in their seats, then why don't you just stay at home and listen to the CD? There's no point. You want a live experience. You want to be feeling that music in the hall, and it's up to us as performers to be feeling this bridge from the audience to the stage and that bridge going back from the stage to the audience. There's got to be that feeling."

This weekend Christophers leads the the Handel and Haydn Society through Henry Purcell's 1695 semi-opera "The Indian Queen," which, despite its title, is actually about an Aztec queen, Zempoalla, before the Spanish conquest. The work was unfinished at Purcell's death and had to be completed by his brother Daniel.

"He's the greatest composer England ever had," says the conductor. Such hyperbole is not the norm for Christophers. He says Henry Purcell was like a 17th-century version of some of the most promising rock stars of the 20th century whose lives were snuffed out too soon.

"He died in his mid-30s and it's one of those composers where you just ask, 'Gosh, what might he have become?' like Mozart," he says. "He's probably the finest composer that wrote in the English language. He's very much the Shakespeare of the musical world."

STU ROSNER

▶ Christophers, in white shirt, will conduct the Handel and Haydn Society through Purcell's 'The Indian Queen' Friday through Sunday. For more info, visit www.handelandhaydn.org.

"He's probably the finest composer that wrote in the English language. He's very much the Shakespeare of the musical world." CHRISTOPHERS, ON HENRY PURCELL Too much from the past?

In his downtime, Harry Christophers usually listens to music from the past, but not as far back as the music he conducts.

"My children are all in their early 20s and they keep me abreast of all sorts of things. They were the first people that introduced me to Jack Johnson and Bon Iver," he says. "I love cooking, [but] my wife clears out of the kitchen because she finds some of the stuff I play too much from the past, like John Mayall and the Bluesbreakers, or I had 'Led Zeppelin I' on the other day. It's great!"

Jason Statham isn't troubled by your labels
He loves his genre and he's sticking to it with 'Parker'

FILM DISTRICT

The last action hero

Q&A

You got your start in competitive diving. What do you make of the trend in celebrity diving shows?
Is it popular now? I need to see that. People are going to get f—ing hurt. Who'd have thought it, because it was a f—ing tiny sport when I was doing it. And it still is, as far as I know. It doesn't put together big crowds — apart from the Olympics, and that's only every four years. ... Back when I started, nobody knew what f—ing diving was.

With "Parker," Jason Statham continues his bid to be a 21st-century answer to his "Expendables" co-stars Sylvester Stallone and Arnold Schwarzenegger, a purveyor of action films that can be big and loud but don't have to be dumb. His latest finds him as a crafty crook with a surprisingly strict moral code — even when faced with the likes of Jennifer Lopez.

Do you consider this in the same vein as things like "The Mechanic" and "The Italian Job," putting a modern spin on older action material?
You wouldn't be far wrong in saying that. Parker's a different sort of animal for me, though. He's a crook, he's a criminal, but there's something about him that makes you forgive what he's doing in some way, and I think there's an interesting aspect to that. You know, you're not supposed to like crooks or criminals. You know, he's devoted to his girlfriend. There's something about that, as well. Crooks and criminals usually haven't got many morals.

Quoted

"He's a man of his word. And that is something that people have to admire because, you know, I live in f—ing Hollywood. Your word doesn't mean much here, believe me."
STATHAM, ON HIS CHARACTER

It's interesting, that girlfriend character, since you also have Jennifer Lopez in the movie and people would assume, you two together onscreen ...
You'd expect something. When's it going to go off? I know, some people will go, "Oh, I don't believe it, it's stupid. How could he resist? It's f—ing Jennifer Lopez. What, is he blind? Is he stupid?" But [director] Taylor [Hackford] was insistent on keeping this guy true to himself and him having a strength in departments where other men were weak. [Laughs]

There aren't that many new action stars in the vein of your "Expendables" co-stars. How did you manage to become one?
I mean, to categorize myself in the same breath as Stallone and Arnold is a little bit beyond me, but I love their movies. I'm a big action-movie junkie, and it's great to be making action movies. I think it's still the strongest genre and always has been. I think it gets a bad name for itself sometimes because sometimes they're a bit thin on story. ... But I love being in the action-movie genre. It's fun, and it's better than doing period dramas back in England — for me, at least.

▶ Josh Duhamel stars in "Movie 43."

'Movie 43'

In something of an attempt to take on the comedy shorts that have been killing it on sites like Funny or Die and My Damn Channel, the Farrelly brothers produce (and direct a segment of) this collection of vignettes, tied together with the story of three teenagers on a quest to find the most taboo movie of all time. The movie features a staggering amount of celebrities — it's nice to see this kind of stunt casting applied to something besides a Garry Marshall cheesefest.

'Parker'

We know, we know: Jason Statham in an action movie might be a little hard to get used to — if you haven't seen the 20-plus actions movies he's already done. This guy is more willingly typecast than even Dwayne "The Rock" Johnson, who displayed his range with "Tooth Fairy" at least. Still, the British action star is never too hard on the eyes, much like his co-star Jennifer Lopez. The two play scheming thieves in this thriller directed by Taylor Hackford.

'Hansel and Gretel: Witch Hunters'

Like "Snow White and the Huntsman," this reinvention of the Brothers Grimm fairy tale gets a gritty update. This time, the siblings who suffered as children at the hands of a candy house-dwelling witch are grown up and ready to avenge the wrongdoings of witches the world over. Gemma Arterton and Jeremy Renner play the titular pair. ● HEIDI PATALANO

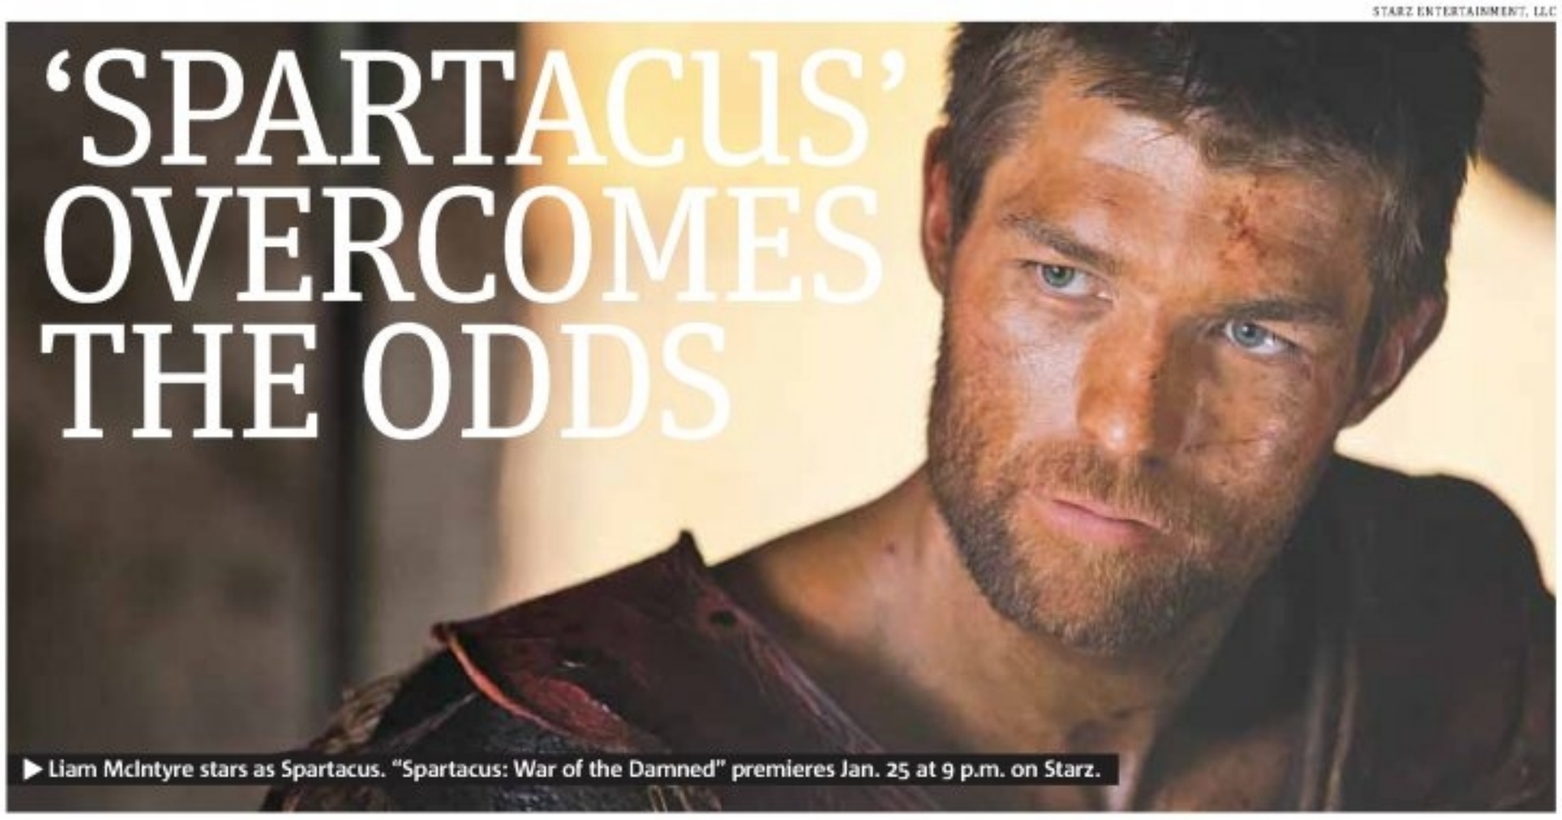
'SPARTACUS' OVERCOMES THE ODDS



▶ Liam McIntyre stars as Spartacus. "Spartacus: War of the Damned" premieres Jan. 25 at 9 p.m. on Starz.

The epic tale of rebellion enters its final episodes on Starz ◐ Liam McIntyre talks about stepping into the warrior's sandals for two seasons

Behind the stylized violence and impressively choreographed sex scenes that have made "Spartacus" the Starz network's must-see guilty pleasure is the story of a broken man fighting against all odds to regain respect and an everyman suffocating under Roman rule. For the past two seasons, Liam McIntyre has brought the legend of the title character to life: from suffering the pain of his wife's murder to seeking vengeance and bringing down an empire that thrived on the degradation of men. As this swords-and-sandals epic enters its final season, McIntyre reflects on the journey of playing such an iconic character.

How has Spartacus come into his own as a leader?

A lot of his drive has been from the love and loss that he's suffered. Now he has a new cause: He has all these people who look to him. His leadership skills have grown through his campaign and through his experience. His generals have supported him, and his numbers have grown in stature and strength. All that's left for him is this ultimate victory against Rome that will give the people their freedom. He realizes he won't have his life, but he can give other people theirs.

Spartacus is told that he's beginning to resemble a god to the people. How does that sit with him?

Yeah, it doesn't sit very well. He's not that kind of guy. He's been trapped in this massive war that's so far beyond anything he'd ever expected. He's fighting the odds in a very strong sense of the word. Because he's having so much success, to these people, he's like a savior to them. He's actually doing it — the impossible — which is to start beating back Rome and earn people their freedom. But he's a man of the people, and he's going to return to them. It's important to him.

Did you play the role of leader on the set?

It's funny that life imitates art. The producers sat me down and said, "Now you're the lead. You have to lead by example in every way. You've gotta be on time, you've gotta make sure people are doing their job." I'm like, "Wow, this is a much bigger job than I thought." [Laughs] As the show progressed, it just became a natural thing. I'm not a boring guy, but I'm pretty straight laced. Spartacus tries to keep everyone on the straight and narrow and the right path. I guess, in a weird way, that's the role I ended up having on set as well. I'd be the guy who would try to rally the troops as best I could. I guess I took it on professionally as a part of my role.

What were those last days of filming like?

I remember Andy Whitfield [who originated the role of Spartacus, but died of non-Hodgkin's lymphoma in 2011] told me that the team at "Spartacus" was like a giant family. He was absolutely right. I was watching the last episode and doing DVD commentary on it a couple days ago; I could barely watch it. It was so raw and so sad, both the story onscreen and knowing what had transpired with Andy and remembering the incredible family. By the last couple of shots, I was doing some of the most emotionally grueling work I've ever done. It has changed the way I've lived my life — not just as an actor, but as a person.

Live long, prosper and take a very wide range of roles

You may know Zachary Quinto for his role as Dr. Spock But beginning next weekend, the actor will play a 1940s warehouse worker

Though he's best known for playing creepy killers and as the young Spock in J.J. Abrams' "Star Trek" franchise, Zachary Quinto has roots in the theater, and he says it's his passion, too.

"That's how I started to find my way into acting as a kid," says Quinto. "I'm at a point in my life where I have to make good on a promise to myself to return to the thing that matters the most to me."

He's achieving that goal this winter in Cambridge, where he has joined the American Repertory Theater's production of "The Glass Menagerie."

Quinto says he loves the immediacy and vitality of stage acting.

"It fulfills me in a more substantial way than any experience in film or television can," he says.

He's taken the role of Tom, a warehouse worker who dreams of escaping his oppressive mother and fragile sister in Tennessee Williams' autobiographical play.

"Understanding Tom's personal journey has been very important to my process," says Quinto, 35. "Williams was about my age when he wrote the play, so I can really relate to the author."

The play opened in 1945, and has since cemented its spot in American theatrical history.

"When it premiered, plays weren't done this way," explains Quinto. "Tennessee Williams was transcending limitations and doing so in such a staggeringly poetic way, but also in such a relatable and resonant way that it became an instant classic."

'The Glass Menagerie' opens Feb. 1 and runs through March 17. For more info visit www.americanrepertorytheater.org

The catharsis of playing a psycho

Quinto's character in "The Glass Menagerie" is much different from the creepy guys he's played on TV, like serial murderer Sylar in "Heroes" and psycho Dr. Thredson in "American Horror Story."

"They certainly have forced me to go places in the human psyche that are uncomfortable," says Quinto. "I think in some ways it was cathartic, a good outlet to explore those things in myself. That's the gift of being an actor."

The rundown

THEATER

'As Bees in Honey Drown'
Friday through Sunday
Factory Theatre
791 Tremont St., Boston
$20-$25, 671-945-0773
www.fudgetheatre.com
No, this isn't another documentary about colony collapse disorder — it's a wicked comedy by Douglas Carter Beam about a con woman, improbably named Alexa Vere de Vere, who preys on her victims' fantasies of celebrity, stripping them of everything. When a mark she'd left for dead turns out to be alive and rather angry, she finds herself marked.

'The Irish... and How They Got that Way'
Through Mar. 17
Davis Square Theater
255 Elm St., Somerville
www.frankmccourtstheirish.com
This play by Frank "Angela's Ashes" McCourt tells the story of the Irish people both at home and in America in an irreverently affectionate (and thus appropriately Irish) manner, through a series of tales of variable tallness and songs ranging from "Danny Boy" to George M. Cohan to U2, striking just the right balance of entertainment and history lesson.

MOVIES

Science on Screen: 'Rushmore'
Monday, 7 p.m.
Coolidge Corner Theatre
290 Harvard St., Brookline
$8-$10, 617-734-2500
www.coolidge.org
The central irony of Wes Anderson's "Rushmore" is that Max Fischer, for all his precociousness and pretensions to adult seriousness, is still very much a kid. Therefore, the Coolidge is pairing this screening with a lecture on the adolescent brain by Harvard psychiatry professor Steven Schlozman. Max would most likely scoff, but that's sort of the point.

A. SERGEEV

▶ Ksenia Kutepova and Alexey Kolubkov star in "Family Happiness."

THEATER

'Family Happiness'

Saturday and Sunday
Cutler Majestic Theatre
219 Tremont St., Boston
$45-$125, 617-824-8400
www.artsemerson.org
Russia's Fomenko Theatre presents their adaptation of this Leo Tolstoy novel. It's told from the point of view of Masha, who recalls her youthful affair with and marriage to her father's friend Sergey and the disillusionment that came as romantic fantasy ran into dull reality — in other words, the play's title is a bit ironic. It's presented in Russian with English subtitles.

DANCE

'The Epiphany'
Friday and Saturday
Boston University Dance Theatre
915 Comm. Ave., Boston
$20-$25, 857-222-4513
www.jo-medance.com
Jo-Me Dance, a company dedicated to both performance and education of inner-city youth, teams up with the Boston City Singers for this concert, featuring five new works choreographed by co-director Joe Gonzalez. The company describes its style as a "fusion of contemporary-funk, ballet and modern dance as well as acting" exploring "distortion of the body, natural patterns, chemical reactions between humans and emotional conflicts." Art in Boston: An Inaugural Exhibition from the Collection of Sinclair Hitchings
Through March 1
Chandler Gallery

COMEDY

Roz Chast

Saturday, 8 p.m.
Sanders Theatre
45 Quincy St., Cambridge
$30-$65, 617-482-6661
www.celebrityseries.org
This New Yorker cartoonist is a master depicter of modern neurosis. Her characters always seem to be gritting their teeth, eyes bulging, agonizing over some real or imagined crisis — quarter-life, mid-life, late-life, career, economic, health, marriage, psychological — whatever's available, basically. At this appearance, entitled "Theories of Everything," she'll share her sharp, witty insights into life's little Armageddons.

As the Boston Public Library's keeper of prints, Sinclair Hitchings spent 43 years collecting drawings, prints, photos, postcards and watercolors, with a focus on local works. Needless to say, he became pretty good at spotting a gem. This exhibition displays works from his own private collection that will form the cornerstone of Arts in Boston, his newly created local arts organization.

Revolutions: Photographs of the Arab Spring
Sunday through Feb. 22

Art Institute of Boston
700 Boylston St., Boston

As much a memorial to a fallen journalist as a photographic exhibition, this show features the work of French photographer Remi Ochlik, who was killed during a Syrian uprising last year. Ochlik's pictures show the individual personalities within a collective struggle and the human complexities of a situation sometimes rendered in glib terms by the wider media.

ART

Alexandra Rozenman: Transplanted

Through April 8
Multicultural Arts Center
41 2nd St., Cambridge
Free, 617-577-1400
www.multiculturalartscenter.org

While the primitive, childlike quality of these curious and beautiful paintings recalls the American folk-art tradition, their gorgeous, autumnal color schemes, textural complexity and mysteriously surreal symbolism eliminate any notion that "folk art" might just be a euphemism for "amateurish." In fact, Rozenman strikes a perfect balance between eccentric "outsider" charm and schooled, self-aware technique.

THE WORD

Metro's Dorothy Robinson shares her take on the world of gossip @dorothyatmetro dorothy.robinson@metro.us

The feed ...

Checking in with some of Hollywood's biggest names to see what they've been up to — in their own words, in 140 characters or fewer.

The Word's readers react to the Beyonce lip-syncing controversy. Consensus: They (almost all) don't care!

@cialwalls
I don't care if she lip-synced. It was still her voice and talent. There are more important things to worry about.

@GossipTidbits
Live singing at #inaugurations is expected! Aretha Franklin, Kelly Clarkson rocked out live! Lip-syncing feels deceptive

@therealjerry
Nope. Do not care. Celebs/musicians do it all the time at other events, like sports, so its not a big deal at all to me.

@v0xtheriot
if she can fake her baby bump she can fake her singing. Seriously though, most celebs lip sync. This is old news

@sarrible
Beyonce gets to do whatever she wants.

New couple alert? Tiger Woods and Lindsey Vonn

PHOTOS: GETTY IMAGES

▶ Tiger Woods is reportedly seeing Lindsey Vonn, inset.

According to the new issue of Star, golfer Tiger Woods and Olympic skier Lindsey Vonn are being all sorts of athletic together — in bed.

The magazine reports the two have been playing kissy face with one another since November and have even gone on a vacation to Antigua together.

The magazine also says this is a great match as Woods has a thing for blondes. (Editor's note: He also has a thing for redheads, and brunettes and, well, any woman, ever.) So, following the laws of tabloid magazines, this means they are totally going to end up married.

"He wants to marry again," an insider tells Star, "and thinks Lindsey could be the woman."

Which leads us to ask: How is Vonn's aim at SUV windows?

Speidi set sail for England

Watch out, England. Heidi Montag and Spencer Pratt are taking their nonsense across the pond, according to the Daily Star.

The couple, who were surprisingly unknown in the country before a starring role in "Celebrity Big Brother 11," have apparently enraptured the country with their vapid (yet strangely alluring) brand of reality TV vitriol.

"Speidi have been TV gold on 'Celebrity Big Brother' and are clearly no fans of the British," a source told the Daily Star. "It makes perfect sense for them to bag their own explosive series here."

According to the paper, the two will travel around the country making fun of the British people they encounter.

Poor England. They give us Judi Dench, Adele, Ian McKellen, Daniel Day Lewis and Dame Edna — and we're returning the favor with Heidi and Spencer. They're probably pretty pleased about how the Revolutionary War panned out by this point.

Quoted

Talking points

Lohan's latest rejected by SXSW, Sundance

Lindsay Lohan's latest bid at a big-screen comeback is having trouble getting off the ground. Her racy and controversial film "The Canyons" was rejected by the Sundance Film Festival earlier this month, and now it appears the South by Southwest festival in Austin, Texas, wants nothing to do with the film either, according the Hollywood Reporter. Sources say the film suffers from significant "quality issues" and has "an ugliness and a deadness to it."

Is Bell having a boy or a girl?

Kristen Bell seemed to hint during an interview with Ellen DeGeneres that she's going to give birth to a boy, but the "House of Lies" star kept coy with a "maybe" when pressed. Bell had said that fiance Dax Shepard was looking forward to "all the off-roading he'll have in this tiny partner," but she says that doesn't mean it couldn't be a daughter. "Do you have to be a boy to off-road? Absolutely not!" Bell said.

Dunham speaks out about Rihanna

"Girls" creator and star Lena Dunham is no stranger to criticism, but now she's going on the attack by chastising Rihanna for the messages the pop singer sends young fans with her behavior. "I just think about how many little girls beyond what I could even comprehend are obsessed with Rihanna," Dunham tells Alec Baldwin during a chat for his "Here's the Thing" podcast. "She gets back together with Chris Brown and posts a million pictures of them smoking marijuana together on a bed. And it cracks my heart in half."

A flavorful spin on a classic

Forget picking at dry, bland chicken ◐ This recipe adds Asian-inspired zest to one of your favorite dishes and has a handy dipping sauce so you can skip the ketchup ◐ The day-after sandwiches will be ridiculous

Weekend recipe

Spending a few minutes preparing a handful of ingredients for a marinade gives this dish tons of flavor, plus the bonus of a built-in sauce after the chicken is cooked. Just combine soy sauce, ginger, garlic and a little brown sugar in a baking dish, add the chicken, and let it marinate in the fridge overnight.

When you're ready to cook it, put the whole dish in the oven, and in forty minutes you'll have crispy, saucy, flavorful chicken. (Note: If you're using a glass or ceramic baking dish, do not skip step 3 where you bring it up to room temperature before baking, or else your dish could crack!)

Serve with rice and a quick vegetable side dish.

Asian-marinated baked chicken

Ingredients:

½ cup soy sauce
¼ cup packed dark brown sugar
3 tablespoons peeled and finely chopped fresh ginger
1 tablespoon finely chopped garlic (from about five medium cloves)
2 teaspoons toasted sesame oil
1 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
3 pounds bone-in, skin-on chicken thighs, drumsticks, breasts, or a combination of all three

Directions:

1 Place everything except the chicken in a 13-by-9-inch broiler-proof baking dish and whisk to combine.

2 Lay the chicken in a single layer of the marinade and turn to coat. Cover, refrigerate and marinate at least twelve hours and up to 24 hours, turning the chicken at least once during the marinating time.

3 Remove the chicken from the refrigerator and let it sit at room temperature for about 30 minutes. Meanwhile, heat the oven to 475°F and arrange a rack in the middle.

4 Turn all the chicken pieces skin-side-up in the dish. (If you're using drumsticks, just turn to recoat them in the marinade.) Bake until the chicken is starting to turn a dark brown color, about 40 minutes.

5 Set the oven to broil. Broil until the chicken skin is crisped, about three to five minutes more. Serve with the sauce on the side.

Game plan

If you're using chicken breasts for this recipe, cut them in half crosswise before putting them in the marinade so they'll cook at the same rate as the rest of the chicken pieces.

Winter brew picks

Perfect hibernation partners

Here's a little winter brew 101 for you: Did you know that these specialty winter beers were originally created by brewers to give as a gift to their good customers and friends around the holidays? Pretty soon they became so popular that breweries (and their marketing and accounting departments) decided it would be a good idea to distribute them to larger audiences.

"Winter brews are for when the weather is cold, so they have deep, rich flavors," says Craig Hartinger, marketing manager at Merchant du Vin, a specialty beer importer. "They are the beers you want to curl under a blanket with."

Guinness Generous Ale Winter Selection Variety Pack

Guinness Generous Ale can be found in the Winter Selection Variety along with Guinness' Draught, Foreign Extra Stout and Black Lager (three of each). Unlike a traditional Guinness, the amber Generous Ale is surprisingly crisp and carbonated.

Samuel Smith's Winter Welcome Ale

The Winter Welcome Ale isn't as thick as you would expect from the noted brewer's winter seasonal. In fact, the Winter Welcome Ale is a pretty accessible, balanced brew with hints of malt and caramel hops.

Newcastle Winter IPA

The limited-edition Newcastle Winter IPA boasts a copper color with a strong hops aroma, subtle caramel notes, a full body and a balanced finish, staying true to the traditional characteristics found in British-style IPAs. It's very balanced and drinkable.

Your guide to winter dining

Whether it's 5 or 50 degrees out — and it really could go either way — if there's a fireplace, you're bound to say, 'Let me stand next to your fire' Where to get the best eats while you are warming up in a cozy environment

The Fireplace in Brookline lives up to its name with a real, log-burning fireplace surrounded by several hearthside tables. Chef/owner Jim Solomon introduced warming flavors to his winter menu, too. An appetizer of mushrooms and natural ham in a creamy Madeira emulsion is poured over a crisped Johnny Cake made with cornmeal from Gray's Grist Mill in Rhode Island, the home state of this pancake.

"Thyme and rosemary enrich the flavor and add aromatics," says Solomon. "The type of mushrooms varies, based on what is available from Ben (the Mushroom Man) Malison. The Johnny Cake may be the hidden gem in this dish, though."

Chowder is the ultimate winter warmer. Solomon's shrimp and fire-roasted tomato chowder is finished with New Hampshire-made bacon.

"The charred flavor of tomatoes and smoke from the bacon hit the spot on a cold day," he says. Roasted fennel, red pepper, potatoes and garlic are incorporated, too. "A light chowder served piping hot is the goal," says Solomon.

At the Capiz Lounge on the Waterfront, hearty soups pair with fireside tables. Chef Richard Garcia's Littleneck Clam chowder starts with in-house smoked bacon, fresh clam juice and dry white wine for a piquant, less heavy base.

"We finish each soup to order and add fresh Cape Cod surf clams and cream to the base at the last minute to keep the clams tender," says Garcia.

LOCAL 149

▶ Later on, they'll conspire as they dream by the fire at Local 149.

RENAISSANCE BOSTON WATERFRONT HOTEL

▶ Friends enjoy the fire together at Capiz.

Garcia's lobster minestrone is similarly finished with fresh-cooked lobster and a Parmesan froth made from typically discarded Parmesan rinds.

"This is an ode to New England," he says. "The base is a rich house-made lobster stock, and we add Maine-grown yellow-eyed beans along with winter [vegetables like] kale, winter squash, turnips and Savoy cabbage."

Spend a winter's afternoon with Afternoon tea at The Mandarin Oriental, Boston's pop-up Parlor, which is extended until the end of January. This modern, but nonetheless cozy, fireplace forms a warming centerpiece to the open-plan lobby lounge, where pastry chef Oralia Perez's tea "fancies" include spiced pear tart, dried fruit scone and gingerbread.

"These flavors and ingredients correspond with the season," says Perez. "There's a variety of spices that evoke feelings of comfort and warmth. ... I enjoy creating winter desserts because they remind me of family and togetherness."

Go for cake, or full afternoon tea, which includes one of everything. Or stop in for some heavenly hot chocolate.

At Local 149 in Southie, a couple of chef Leah Dubois's winter dishes include jalapeno and add a little extra warmth to dining by their real log fire.

Try the sweet potato and ricotta dumplings with coconut cream sauce and the cider-braised short rib.

"It's a fluffy, naturally sweet dumpling, pan-seared to get a touch crispy," says Dubois. "The coconut cream is enhanced with leeks and jalapeno. This vegetarian dish is finished with crispy shiitake mushrooms and cashew brittle. ... The short rib is braised in apple cider, local pears, sage, onion and jalapeno. The subtle spice of the jalapeno matches perfectly with the acidity and warming flavors of apple cider. We serve it with shredded potato hash and a sunny-side-up quail egg. It's an elegant steak-and-eggs dinner."

Washington: Our most misquoted president?

RE: "WASHINGTON WANTS YOU FOR THE UNITED STATES MILITIA" (METRO, JAN. 24) Letter writer Andrew Criscione is the one who needs a crash course: He claims Washington said, "A free people ought not only to be armed and disciplined, but they should have sufficient arms and ammunition to maintain a status of independence from any who might attempt to abuse them, which would include their own government."

It's a great quote; too bad Washington never actually said it. The actual quote is, "A free people ought not only to be armed but disciplined; to which end a uniform and well digested plan is requisite: And their safety and interest require that they should promote such manufactories, as tend to render them independent on others, for essential, particularly for military supplies" (First Annual Message to Congress 1790).

Doesn't have quite the same tone as the bogus quote you mentioned, Andrew.

I hope the next time you come across a quote attributed to the founding fathers that sounds like it was written by an NRA spokesman, you'll check if it's authentic before repeating it.

JANSSON STEGNER, VIA E-MAIL

In Thursday's Metro, a writer offers a quote from George Washington about the supposed need for a free people to arm themselves as a protection from abuse, even from their own government, and then follows that with a general quote, from the Militia Act of 1792, about all white males being part of the militia.

What the writer neglects to say is: In 1794, George Washington called various militias into federal service to suppress the Whisky Rebellion, which involved an insurrection against perceived government abuse.

The writer also seems to suggest that Washington praised the concept of armed rebellion against the government of which he was president.

It seems to me that, if the writer wants to talk about a "crash course," he should be the first one to take it.

JON MELICK, VIA E-MAIL

Quoted

"As for the 'militia,' the offered quote merely defines who can serve in one. ... In any event, the Act has been radically changed — first in 1862 and then most notably in 1903, which abolished the concept of the militia as it was known in 1789."

Inquiring minds want to know ...

Over the past week there has been some great letters saying how we shouldn't give up our Second Amendment, but no one is saying what we should do. How do we protect ourselves from the crazy bunch and still keep our homes safe at the same time?

Horoscope

♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. Disappointment is likely if someone for whom you do a favor is unable to adequately express his or her thanks. You'll feel better if you don't expect anything.

♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. A burned child fears the fire, but you're not a kid anymore. Stop shunning a former collaborator just because he or she erred in the past. Be the bigger person and forgive and forget.

♈ Aries March 21-April 19. You're in a better position career-wise than you might think. Though you might see only dark clouds ahead, don't retreat from doing what you should and can do.

♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. Because all your focus is placed on lofty objectives, it might be difficult for you to see the multitudes of lesser but still profitable opportunities. Remember, small things can add up.

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. Although a joint venture in which you're involved should be uppermost in your mind, this isn't likely to be the case. Diverting your attention elsewhere could dilute your efforts.

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. There is a hard way to do things and an easy way. Even though you might recognize the difference, for some reason you'll make things tougher than they need to be.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. If you find yourself in the position of being unable to finalize an important project, don't make things worse by stewing over it. Let those fruits ripen a bit longer on the tree.

♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Don't turn your household into a military installation. Harsh rules and commands won't be nearly as effective as making polite pleas.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. Remember, the mind is a remarkable mechanism for performing wonders. All you have to do is marshal your thinking to conquer doubt and accomplish whatever you wish.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. Because of an inability to capitalize on a good opportunity, the biggest problem you'll have to contend with is accepting your shortcomings.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. Even though you might be truly grateful to someone who does a favor for you, you might be unable to express your gratitude in a way that you feel is adequate. Nonetheless, do your best. BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Darrelle drama

New Jets general manager John Idzik, introduced to the media Thursday, already has a crisis on his hands.

Amid reports that the team would look into trading star cornerback Darrelle Revis, Revis tweeted, "I'm speechless by far but more importantly I feel more upset for the jet nation for having to go through this!!!"

Idzik said "it's way premature" to talk about Revis potentially being traded.

MATT BURKE

CELTS SHOULD LOOK HARD AT A PIERCE TRADE

When Ray Bourque enters TD Garden these days, he enters as a Boston Bruins legend, not as a Bruins and Colorado Avalanche legend. When Michael Jordan's "last shot" is discussed, people talk about the dagger of a jumper he drained in Utah in Game 6 of the 1998 NBA Finals as a member of the Chicago Bulls.

Metro does not endorse the opinions of the author, or any opinions expressed on its pages. Opposing viewpoints are welcome. Send submissions to letters@metro.us.

Not many reminisce about the free throw Jordan hit in Philly against the Sixers on April 16, 2003, which officially was his last NBA shot as a member of the Washington Wizards.

In sports, these late-career pit stops rarely ruin the memories of the prime years for elite athletes. So if you're worried as to what Paul Pierce's Celtics legacy will be when his great career ends, don't. No matter what happens between now and the day No. 34 decides to hang 'em up, he's a Celtic for life.

This idealistic "loyalty" thing is really the only reason any Celtics fan would want to hold on to Pierce. As currently constructed, the Celtics aren't winning Banner 18 this year, and when next season starts, Pierce will be 36-years-old.

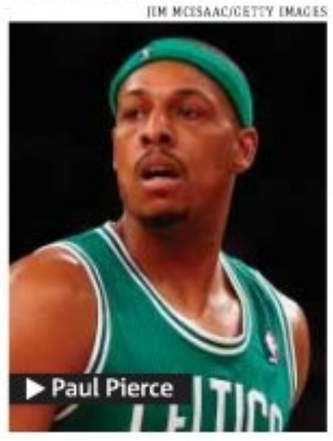
Pierce is a great scoring wing player. Some even argue that he might be the best pure scorer in team history (I still think that Bird guy was pretty good). But Pierce's points have always come via 3-pointers and spin moves in the paint and pull-up, mid-range jumpers. Not often do they come on a fast break with Rajon Rondo leading the charge. Never do they come with Pierce on the receiving end of a Rondo alley-oop.

At one point in his career, we worried that Pierce's prime was wasting away because the Celtics couldn't find any players who complimented his style. Soon, we might begin to wonder the same in the case of Rondo.

We still don't know what it looks like when Rondo plays with a super-athletic wing player who can score the basketball. Sorry, but Jeff Green, he with the 9.4-ppg stat line, doesn't count.

Would the Celtics' offense flow a bit better with Memphis' Rudy Gay filling the lane? Would Rondo's old high school buddy Josh Smith be able to finish off one of Rondo's lobs in transition? I'd like to think so.

JIM MCISAAC/GETTY IMAGES



▶ Paul Pierce

The problem in acquiring one of those players is that the Celtics will need to give up at least one of their big chips. Pierce fits the bill.

Why would a team like the Grizzlies or Hawks make a swap with the C's for Pierce? Well, both are in the middle of the pack of their respective conference's playoff picture. Both are in need of a playoff-tested veteran to push them into the conversation of the league's best teams. In short, the Celtics need to get younger and those two teams need to get older and wiser.

Pierce, whose contract runs through 2014, was nearly dealt to the New Jersey Nets last year at the trade deadline for Mehmet Okur's expiring contract and a lottery pick, according to Yahoo's Adrian Wojnarowski. Danny Ainge has long said that if the right deal came along, he would put loyalty on the back burner.

The time is now for the Celtics to get younger and more athletic. If that means saying goodbye to the beloved captain of the Green, so be it.

▶ Ray Allen is averaging 11.4 ppg this year for Miami.

Celtics ready for Ray in 'betrayal bowl'

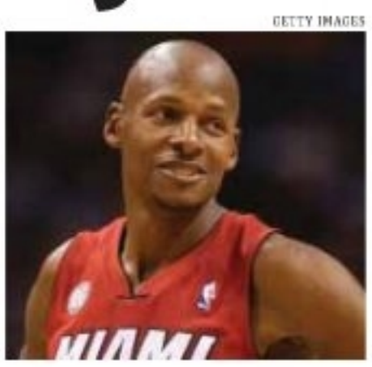
It's the matchup Celtics fans have been talking about since the day Ray Allen left town: Celtics-Heat, at the Garden.

On Sunday, Allen returns to the city where he won his first and only championship. Except this time, he's wearing red and black … and will be accompanied by LeBron James and Dwyane Wade.

Allen's bolt for South Beach left a sour taste in the mouths of the Celtics organization, his teammates and fans. It probably ended the chances that he'd get his number retired by the C's too, if that mattered to him.

One former Celtics teammate of Allen's told Metro Boston that the way in which Allen left — choosing Miami over Boston shortly after that team knocked the C's out of the postseason — irked him a bit. The player understands that Allen had to do what's best for himself, but wondered if his future with Boston, or the possibility of joining the Heat in the offseason, was on Allen's mind even when the two sides were playing each other in the postseason.

GETTY IMAGES



"It's possible, yeah. Who knows what's going to happen over the course of the summer?"

MIAMI HEAT GUARD RAY ALLEN TO THE RACINE JOURNAL TIMES, ON POSSIBLY RETIRING THIS YEAR

So how has Allen fit into his role with the Heat? Just fine, actually. His shots are down a bit, but his percentages are still up there. It's what Allen's long-range shot does for the rest of the team that is his real value. As he did with the C's, Allen opens up the court, forcing guards to play up tight on him far from the basket. That creates space for Miami's other stars to do the heavy lifting.

So can some of the C's struggles be attributed to the fact that Allen isn't with the team? Perhaps. The two guards Boston brought in, Jason Terry and Courtney Lee, have had below-average starts with the team, with Terry notably cold from the field.

Boston's uninspiring play has undoubtedly cast a shadow over the upcoming matchup.

That said, a win on Sunday could do wonders for the team's overall morale. It could be the win Boston needs to get things rolling in the right direction. Then again, this year's team has been the team that couldn't. JIMMY TOSCANO

Martinez back in Boston as Sox assistant

Pedro Martinez, one of the most revered figures in the history of Boston sports, is back with the Red Sox.

No, Martinez will not be in Boston's pitching rotation in 2013. But he will assist general manager Ben Cherington in making decisions and will help guide many of the organization's young pitchers.

Martinez was named special assistant to the general manager Thursday.

"We are very excited to have Pedro onboard with us and back in the Red Sox organization," Cherington said in a press release.

"He was one of the game's most dominant pitchers and without a doubt a beloved figure in Red Sox history. Similar to former teammate Jason Varitek, who joined the baseball operations staff in September, Pedro will be involved in several areas, including the evaluation, mentorship and instruction of young players in spring training and throughout the season."

"Ben Cherington's meetings this week have been outstanding," Martinez said in a statement.

"It is an honor to be back with the Red Sox and help in any way I can. I am grateful to our leaders; I believe in them, and I thank them for allowing me to return to the field and help us win again. My heart will always live in Boston."

"I am thrilled to be returning to this organization and to the city I love."
